

Editorial Words

Dear Readers,

I am so happy to write few words about the Scientific Journal of Bielsko-Biala School of Finance and Law (ASEJ) which has been published since 1997. I would like to request our readers and scholars to visit our site at <https://asej.eu/resources/html/cmsi/1674>. Journal aims “to encourage scientists to publish their experimental and theoretical research relating to social sciences in as much detail as possible in order to present the latest socio-economic phenomena and to promote scientific predictions and impact assessments of global change and development”. Journal scope combines subjects of social policy, environmental policy, sustainable development and ‘Challenges relating to Economy, Law, Computers and IT, Internal Security and social sciences”.

The contemporary world is in very difficult trajectory. As a matter of fact, the Humanity is in crisis and in challenge. The scholarly world is also kind of traumatized. We all are scared due to uncertainty created by the Corona Pandemic. COVID-19 pandemic has created great uncertainty humanity has ever faced and its impact is everywhere, over the economy, employment, finances, relationships, and physical and mental health as well as in social equilibrium.

Through this editorial note, I would like to urge / request to all educators, scholars, scientists, researcher and to all other knowledge related stakeholders of the globe, that, the knowledge creators and educators should not stop our research and our contribution to the society, whatever uncertainty we face. The world has been facing crisis throughout its civilization and development processes and witnessed many pandemic crisis as well as other kind of crises, including even apolitical, political, economic, social, psychological, ethnic, gender, race, colour, (human created) or natural disasters, which had completely changed the face human civilizations. However, mostly, the saviours have been always the knowledgeable persons or change makers who never stopped working fearlessly. As such we should acknowledge ourselves that, we are the knowledge creators, wisdom generators of the society; therefore, we are also hope creators; beauty admires, and love and respect maintainers. We should take our responsibility in a way that other stakeholders also realize that, this is not the end of the world and they also need to feel that, together we can bear the risk, tolerate the uncertainty and maintain the hope of anxiety free world. Knowledge is the key to open the reality of the problem and knowledge helps to realize or to understand the facts and wisdom is the proper utilization of acquired knowledge. As knowledge practitioner, we are aware that, we are by nature social beings and enjoy ourselves in society.

Finally, I request to all scholars to utilize the acquired, learned, experienced and practiced knowledge which can help to create and maintain the harmonious relationships, within and beyond of human and non-human living beings.

As noted in the beginning of this note the Scientific Journal of Bielsko-Biala School of Finance and Law (ASEJ) aims to bring the finest knowledge on the major social sciences, journal always welcomes, papers which links with the humanity and nature, innovative ideas which addresses the socio- political- economic, legal and environmental as well as the issues of the sustainability of the planet.

I thank to you all, who had contributed to this journal since 1995 to date. Especially thank you to contributors of this issue; who have shown that uncertainty does not stop to the knowledge producers, and to the all other scholars, who will be contributing in coming issues of the Scientific Journal of Bielsko-Biala School of Finance and Law (ASEJ). Once again, thank you to the ASEJ team for considering me as the editor of this issue. Thank you.

*Prof. Medani P. Bhandari, PhD,
Editor of the ASEJ, Issue 2, Volume 2, 2020.*